What Kind of Leader are You?

Ashish Tandon traces changing leadership styles in Corporate India

Global corporations have long had to contend with a dynamic and volatile business environment, buffeted by micro- and macro-economic factors that impact their business. For Indian companies, however, the situation has not always been that way. In the last few decades, corporate India has gone through four distinct phases, and each phase has required a unique set of leadership skills to help firms deal effectively with the most pressing issues of the day. The socio-political and economic environment has also been a major catalyst of leadership styles, which have changed sharply over the years.

Leadership in the past...
